A long-time employee of a local dental office has been arrested in connection with the alleged theft of nearly $300,000 from her employer over at least a four-year period beginning in 2015.

Malinda A. Downey, 47, of Madison, has been charged with one count of theft, a Level 5 felony, but additional charges could be forthcoming as accountants, Indiana State Police and the Jefferson County Prosecutors Office continue investigating the case.

Downey is currently free on a $10,000 cash bond. She appeared in Jefferson Superior Court Friday, for a reading of the charges and a "not guilty" plea was entered with her trial date set for 8:30 a.m. on Thursday, Jan. 16, 2020.

Downey, who was arrested by state police Wednesday, had been employed as an office worker at Pawlak Orthodontics, 160 Demaree Drive, Madison, for 17 years using both Ortho-Trac and Quickbooks programs to track customer payments, services and patient information before depositing receipts in the bank account for the business.

According to a probable cause affidavit, Dr. Elizabeth Pawlak, owner of the practice, had suspected discrepancies in receipts and deposits for some time but on July 11 and July 12 discovered that cash payments from two new patients were not properly documented. Pawlak then conducted a review that confirmed payments recorded in Quickbooks did not match those recorded in Ortho-Trac and an estimated $150,000 could not be accounted for.

At that point, Pawlak asked Indiana State Police to investigate the case and Det. David Makowsky advised Pawlak to seek a complete audit of her books by a CPA.

The affidavit said Pawlak and accountant Michael Williams spoke with Downey about the discrepancies on Aug. 12 with Makowsky present and Downey indicated that she must have recorded the transaction incorrectly. When confronted with other discrepancies, Downey did not have

Rebel Food Pantry sets table

Students at Southwestern High School organized a community effort to provide a free Thanksgiving dinner to 42 at-need families through the Rebel Food Pantry Friday afternoon.

The pantry, which is open year-round on the second Thursday each month from 3:15 p.m. to 5:15 p.m., helps assist students and their families who are dealing with food insecurity, said Morgan Hensley, director of the pantry and a teacher at both the middle and high school.

This month, the goal was to put turkeys on the tables of anyone in need of food for Thanksgiving. Local businesses and organizations were quick to help.

In addition to food obtained through private donations and the Gleaners Food Bank of Indiana, the local Cub Scout Pack No. 708 in Hanover led a canned food drive to make sure enough sides were available for the project. In addition, Craig Toyota donated 25 turkeys and offered to buy more if needed and Drew and Ann Marie Rhoten of Mayflower Moving Company also chipped in $200 to cover the cost of the other turkeys, Hensley added.

Hensley met families at the door of the food pantry Friday while student volunteers bagged and got each meal ready. Joe Craig and Greg Sanders of Craig Toyota were posted outside handing turkeys to each family on their way out.

"We live in an economically-deprived area and families struggle, so anything we can do is worth it to us," Hensley said.

MCS Board supports teachers' rally for ed

By COLLIN OVERTON
Courier staff writer

The board of trustees of Madison Consolidated Schools has made its position clear on the teacher protests scheduled for Tuesday in Indianapolis.

A resolution approved unanimously by the board Wednesday night expressed support for the educators attending and calls for legislators to provide more funding and end the current standardized testing system in Indiana.

"Once again we call upon the Indiana Legislature to end their punitive and ineffective testing scheme. We call upon the Indiana Legislature to fund Indiana's public education system in a manner that recognizes the vital role it plays in preserving the future well-being of our state and country," the resolution reads.

See board's resolution and Letter to the Editor from teachers on today's Perspective, Page A4

The district will allow teachers attending the rally to use a professional leave day and provide a school bus to transport participating educators to the event. Board members also will be attending the rally, it said.

"I would just add that I was really proud of the fact that our corporation was one of the first to make this decision," board member Joyce Imel, a retired teacher and principal, said. "I think it's absolutely the correct decision."

Diana Wehner, Madison's Indiana State Teacher's Association representative; Edna Curl, a special education teacher at the Madison Special Services Unit, and Brandon Frye, a business teacher at Southwestern Schools, sent a letter to The Madison Courier outlining their reasons for rallying next Tuesday.

"Ninety percent of all Hoosier students attend public schools (source: IDOE), yet funding for public schools will only increase by approximately 2%," the letter reads. "The reality is that 60 out of 289 public school districts will receive less money in 2020 and 2021 (source: Vic's Statehouse notes No. 337). The legislature must fund ALL public schools at a level that allows for innovative educational

Navy warship to be named for Lugar

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — The U.S. Navy has agreed to name a warship in honor of late Indiana Sen. Richard G. Lugar. Sen. Todd Young announced Wednesday that Navy Secretary Richard Spencer and members of the Lugar family will attend a private naming ceremony for the USS Richard G. Lugar at the Indiana War Memorial in Indianapolis on Monday. Young and fellow Indiana Republican Sen. Mike Braun introduced an amendment to the National Defense Authorization Act in June that called for the Navy's next unnamed Arleigh Burke Class Destroyer warship to be named in honor of Lugar, who died in April at age 87. Lugar volunteered for the Navy and served his country as an officer from 1957 to 1960, including as an intelligence briefer to then Chief of Naval Operations Admiral Arleigh Burke.

Judge convicts man in '17 shooting of trooper

JEFFERSONVILLE — A judge has convicted an 81-year-old man in the shooting of a state trooper who pulled him over for erratic driving. The Clark County judge found Oscar Kays of Jeffersonville guilty of attempted murder but mentally ill Wednesday during a bench trial. His sentencing is set for Dec. 12. Prosecutors said Kays shot Trooper Morgenn Evans in the head when the officer pulled him over for erratic driving in December 2017 in downtown Jeffersonville. Evans returned fire, discharging 11 shots, one of which hit Kays through his truck windshield before Kays left and drove to his home, where he was arrested. Kays and Evans were both treated for the non-life threatening wounds. Evans says he suffers at times from serious headaches and nausea.

Schools recovering from ransomware attack

MISHAWAKA — A school district is working to restore its computer system after hackers crippled the network by infecting it with ransomware. The Penn-Harris-Madison School Corp. notified staff and students' families Tuesday of the hackers' attack. An email to staff said the district's computer network was infected with ransomware that knocked out "all internal network systems" districtwide. District spokeswoman Lucha Ramey said that technology staff shut down the corporation's servers and began running "scrubbing" software Tuesday after learning of the virus. The South Bend Tribune reports that the district said Wednesday it was still working to bring the network servers back online. Earlier this year, officials in LaPorte County, also in northern Indiana, paid about $132,000 in ransom to hackers who took over some of the county government's computers.

Police dog killed during pursuit of suspects

FISHERS — Suburban Indianapolis police say a police dog was killed while tracking a suspected drunken driver in a wooded area. Fishers police Sgt. Tom Weger said officers were pursuing the motorist early Wednesday when the man stopped his vehicle and ran into a neighborhood just north of Indianapolis. Officer Jarred Koopman and the 5-year-old Belgian Malinois, named Harlej, pursued the driver on foot. Koopman let the dog run ahead when the suspect disappeared into the woods.

Weger says Koopman heard what he believed was a gunshot moments later. Officers arrested the man, who had a leg injury believed inflicted by the dog. Harlej was found dead nearby. Weger says Harlej likely died of a gunshot wound.

Police arrested a woman who was also in the vehicle.

Farmer enters plea, will serve probation in case

WEST COLLEGE CORNER — A farmer has pleaded guilty to one count of failing to dispose of a dead animal after an inspection found 38 dead cows on his property. Rodney Sintz, 42, of West College Corner also has been sentenced to a year and a half of probation. Court documents say an Indiana State Board of Animal Health field veterinarian found the dead cows in various stages of decomposition on March 5. Under state law, animals must be properly disposed of within 24 hours of an owner's knowledge that they have died. The veterinarian said other cattle appeared below normal body weight and about half of the herd didn't have access to adequate food and water.

U.S. court rules man can have 'IM GOD' plate

FRANKFORT — A federal court is allowing a man to personalize a license plate with the phrase "IM GOD" after a three-year legal battle over the custom engraving. Court documents show Ben Hart, a self-identified atheist, set out to get the Kentucky plate in 2016. But Hart's request was denied by the state transportation department on the basis it violated antidiscrimination guidelines. News outlets report similar plates had been approved before, including "TRYGOD" and "NOGOD." Kentucky's American Civil Liberties Union and the Freedom From Religion Foundation got involved to help Hart challenge the decision. In an opinion Wednesday by a U.S. District Court in Frankfort, the judge ruled "vanity plates" are private speech protected by the First Amendment and that the state had violated Hart's rights by denying him the plate.

Shelby plant laying off 100 ahead of closure

SHELBYVILLE — A Belgium-based company is closing its plant in Shelbyville, Kentucky, resulting in 100 layoffs early next year. WDRB-TV in Louisville reports Bekaert notified state workforce officials in a letter that it will lay off the employees Jan. 13, which will close at the end of next year. The company plans to keep 12 employees at the plant through Dec. 31, 2020. The letter gives no reason for the plant's closure.

Employee pleads guilty to embezzlement

COVINGTON — The former finance director of the Northern Kentucky Convention and Visitors Bureau has pleaded guilty to embezzling more than $4 million from the agency. Citing the Kenton County Commonwealth's Attorney, The Kentucky Enquirer reports that Bridget Johnson admitted to using her position to send checks from the bureau's online bank accounts to scam artists. Prosecutors said she altered banking records to hide the fraudulent activity. Commonwealth's Attorney Rob Sanders said those on the receiving end would keep some money and wire the rest to overseas bank accounts. Sanders said Johnson lost about $250,000 of her own money to scam artists before she started taking tax dollars from her employer. He says she went from being a victim to a thief and warned that people should never send money to strangers.

Complaint alleges unfair labor practices at jail

LEXINGTON — A union that represents workers at the Fayette County Detention Center has filed a complaint with the Kentucky Labor Cabinet alleging unfair labor practices. The complaint contains several allegations against the city including that officials have retaliated against union leaders, used involuntary transfers as discipline and refused to comply with grievance procedures. Union President Michael Harris says the complaint was filed because other actions haven't led to changes. The union voted "no confidence" in the jail director in September and released a survey showing low morale. Lexington Mayor Linda Gordon has visited the jail twice, but Harris said she hasn't communicated with union leadership on possible changes that would address concerns. City spokeswoman Susan Straub declined to comment, saying officials haven't had time to look at all the allegations.

Teacher accused of sexual contact with 2

BOONEVILLE — A high school teacher accused of having sexual contact with two students has been arrested. Kentucky State Police said in a statement that 40-year-old James S. Cornett of Beattyville is facing two counts of first-degree sex abuse. Police say they learned about the allegations against the Owsley County High School teacher on Monday and began investigating. Cornett was arrested Wednesday and lodged in the Three Forks Regional Jail in Lee County.

Woman charged in death of missing woman

SOMERSET — A woman has been charged in the death of a woman who disappeared this past spring, and whose remains may have been found last week. News outlets report 33-year-old Danelle Nicole Powell, of Somerset, was arrested Thursday on a murder charge. The Pulaski County Sheriff's Office announced that investigators believe human bones found off a county road last week match LeeAnna Brumley, who was 25 years old when she was last seen in May. The remains have been sent to a state medical examiner's office for identification. The sheriff's statement Thursday hints at additional arrests, saying "all those responsible for the death of LeeAnna" will be identified and held responsible.

Folklife Magazine seeks looking for submissions

BOWLING GREEN — The Kentucky Folklife Program at Western Kentucky University is looking for proposals for articles and other pieces documenting Kentucky's folklife. The program said in a news release that this is the first call for proposals for the multimedia digital publication and said the magazine "explores the diversity of expressive cultures within Kentucky." In addition to articles, the magazine is looking for ideas for photo essays, documentary film and audio, interviews and oral histories and performances. Proposals of about 200 to 400 words can be submitted to kyfolklife@wku.edu with the subject heading "Kentucky Folklife Magazine Proposal." Published features receive a contributor's honorarium.

Gov. Beshear ready for 'next chapter' as Bevin concedes

By BRUCE SCHREINER
Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Republican Gov. Matt Bevin conceded to Democratic archnemesis Andy Beshear on Thursday, putting an end to Kentucky's bitterly fought governor's race and setting the stage for divided government in a GOP stronghold.

Bevin, an ally of President Donald Trump, made the dramatic announcement outside his statehouse office on the same day election officials across Kentucky double-checked vote totals at the governor's request. Bevin, trailing by several thousand votes, acknowledged the recanvass wouldn't change the outcome.

"We're going to have a change in the governorship based on the vote of the people," Bevin said at the news conference.

Promising Kentuckians that "we won't let you down," Beshear said later in the day that he's ready to help build the "next chapter" of Kentucky's future.

Looking ahead to dealing with a GOP-led legislature, the governor-elect urged policymakers to find common ground and to "civilly disagree" when they can't.

"If we can work together on the areas that we agree on and we can cut down on the rhetoric in the areas that we don't, there is a significant amount that we can get done," he said. "I believe that the areas that are so important for Kentucky, for instance the health and the education of our people, aren't partisan at all."

It was a subdued scene as members of Bevin's administration watched the pugnacious governor graciously wish Beshear — the state's attorney general — well in his new role.

His concession capped a nearly four-year rivalry that dominated Kentucky politics. Beshear, wielding his authority as the state's top lawyer, challenged a series of Bevin's executive actions during their terms. Their feud spread to the campaign trail.

"I truly want the best for Andy Beshear as he moves forward. I genuinely want him to be successful, I genuinely want this state to be successful," Bevin said.

Beshear thanked Bevin for promising a smooth transition.

Last week's election results showed Bevin trailing Beshear by more than 5,000 votes out of more than 1.4 million cast, for a lead of less than 0.4 percentage points. Secretary of State Alison Lundergan Grimes said Thursday's recanvass of vote counts left the final margin at 5,136 votes. The State Board of Elections is scheduled to meet Nov. 21 to certify the vote totals.

Calling for unity after the divisive campaign, Beshear said Kentuckians share more in common — regardless of party affiliation — than "any national divisions can ever pull us apart."

"Whether you voted for us or not, we are here to serve you," Beshear said at a press conference at the Kentucky Education Association headquarters. "We'll work every single day to earn your faith, to earn your trust."

Bevin vowed not to publicly undermine or second-guess Beshear's actions once his rival becomes governor.

"I am sure there will be things I'm excited by and have complete agreement with, and there will be things that I will probably be on the other side of the equation with, and this is the way things are," Bevin said.

In the days after the Nov. 5 election, Bevin had steadfastly refused to concede while hinting, without offering evidence, that there had been "irregularities" in the voting. However, he faced a growing chorus of state Republicans urging him to accept the results of the recanvass unless he could point to evidence of substantial voter fraud.

Beshear said Thursday that the election was "fair and clean.

IU warns manufacturing slowdown could pose economic risk

By ANDY EAST
(Columbus) The Republic

Economic output in Indiana, the nation and Columbus is expected to grow at a slower pace in 2020, as companies and consumers grapple with the fallout and uncertainty of global trade friction and a projected U.S. manufacturing slowdown.

"We think that the key risk in 2020 is the risk of a further rise in protectionism and trade wars," said Ellie Mafi-Kreft, a clinical associate professor of business economics and public policy at the Kelley School of Business at Indiana University.

Mafi-Kreft, who was one of four experts who provided an economic forecast to a crowd of around 160 guests during Wednesday's 2020 Indiana Business Outlook Panel at The Commons, said overall global economic growth next year is expected to be around 3.4% — the slowest growth rate since the financial crisis of 2009.

The projected slowdown, she said, is largely due to several trade disputes, including trade tensions between the United States and China.

The ongoing trade disputes could create further uncertainty for many businesses in Indiana and impact the manufacturing sector and exports, said Sun Yoon, an economic research analyst at the Indiana Business Research Center who provided an economic forecast for the state.

A slowdown in manufacturing could be bad news for a community such as Columbus that is heavily dependent upon manufacturing, exports and Cummins, a global diesel engine and power company and the city's largest employer, said another panelist, Steven Mohler, a visiting IUPUC professor of management who presented the local economic forecast.

"A continuing decline (in China) coupled with trade disputes reduce the prospects for export-driven businesses, including Cummins, because Cummins relies upon China for growth prospects outside its North American trucking business," Mohler said. "This poses a threat for the Columbus economy in 2020."

Last month, Cummins posted a 3% third-quarter sales decline compared to the July-September quarter in 2018, prompting the Fortune 200 company to forecast a 2% decline in revenue in 2019, according to the the company's third-quarter earnings release.

Lower demand for trucks and construction equipment drove most of the decline, the company said. Sales in North America were flat, while international revenues fell 8%, Mohler said.

The 2020 outlook for Cummins is expected to be flat, with growth in the North American markets offset by declines in the China and India markets, Mohler said.

"We're manufacturing-heavy in the No. 1 manufacturing state in the country, and when we have a manufacturing contraction, it's going to hurt our economy more significantly," said Ryan Brewer, a panelist and IUPUC associate professor of finance. "We're more cyclical than the country on average, and we're even more cyclical than the most cyclical state in the country. …However, the economy runs mostly on consumer spending. It's like 70% of GDP, so it's not going to affect the rest of the country quite as much as it's going to affect us."

However, tariffs and trade disputes are not the only things that could affect Indiana's economy next year, Yoon said. A tight labor market and low unemployment could make it challenging for employers to fill jobs, Yoon said.

Additionally, continued declines in local residential building permits also could be a bad sign for Columbus, Mohler said.

"Residential housing sales and building permits continue to exhibit weakness for the fourth year in the Columbus area," Mohler said. "Following a strong fiscal year 2017 for building permits in Columbus, residential building permits declined 35% in 2018 and an additional 20% in fiscal year 2019. Because building permit growth rate is a leading indicator of economic activity, the continuing decline does not constitute a good omen for Columbus."

Though job creation in Indiana could slow down in 2020, the panel of experts wouldn't go as far as predicting a recession next year.

"We can't really quantify the exact impact of the trade war on the manufacturing sector, but we can predict that a trade war will decrease the export of goods to countries and harm employers and employees," Yoon said.

AT A GLANCE

Counties banding together for improved internet access

By BROOK ENDALE
Evansville Courier & Press

In the digital age, when people are using the internet every day for work, healthcare, remote learning, video streaming and more, it's easy to forget that there are still areas in Vanderburgh, Gibson, and Posey counties with limited or no access to high-speed internet.

Economic development teams from those counties have banded together to request the state and internet service providers work with them to ensure rural residents can have broadband internet access.

Representatives from each county gathered Tuesday at St. Wendel Catholic School in Wadesville to make their concerns heard.

The principal of St. Wendel, Hallie Scheu, spoke at the event and explained how the digital divide is unfairly impacting rural students.

Scheu said even though the school has expanded its infrastructure and provided devices like laptops and tablets for its students, there are limits on how many students can be logged on at any given time.

It's an even bigger issue when students who do not have internet connections at their homes need access to complete their homework and have to drive miles to a business or library that offers internet access.

She recounted a recent incident when the students had a chance to Skype with the Vice President of Crayola, and every device in the building had to be turned off except for that one computer.

Stephen Bottoms, president of the Gibson County Commissioners, attended the meeting and explained how lack of internet was impeding economic growth in the region.

Bottoms said he's seen a growth in investments within manufacturing and farming in Gibson County, but he receives regular complaints from people employed in those industries that they are limited by a lack of high-speed internet access.

Carl Schmitz, the President of the Posey county commissioners, shared similar concerns. He added that there were also safety concerns as the Emergency responders like police, firefighters and EMTs rely on GIS and computers to coordinate where they need to go. Without internet, there are roadblocks.

Audrie Burkett, the Vice President of the Economic Development Coalition of Southwest Indiana, said not having internet access is disrupting the lives of residents.

"In a world where you can work from anywhere, entrepreneurs and remote workers rely on internet access. We want to provide better broadband access for everyone," Burkett said.

"We want to shrink that digital divide so our residents and our community have the access they need in a digital world. It's a key piece of infrastructure to make sure your community stays viable."

She is hopeful that some of the state funding announced for rural broadband infrastructure projects will make its way to Southwest Indiana.

She is asking rural residents to fill out surveys about their limited or lack of high-speed internet access to help spur improvement and change. The survey can be found at: southwestindiana.org/broadband

Those who can't access the internet can call their local County Economic Development teams to fill out the survey via phone.

Pendleton may become first in state to pass anti-marijuana ordinance

By REBECCA R. BIBBS
(Anderson) Herald Bulletin

The town of Pendleton may make history next month by becoming the first municipality in the state to adopt an ordinance that would prohibit the production, distribution and possession if the Indiana Legislature decides to follow other states into the legalization of recreational marijuana.

The Pendleton Town Council on Thursday unanimously approved the proposed ordinance in its first reading. A second reading that could lead to its passage into law is expected to take place at the next meeting Dec. 12.

Pendleton Town Judge George Gasparovic, a member of the Drug Free South Madison County Coalition, has lobbied the council for months in preparation for the introduction of the proposed ordinance, saying the town wants to get ahead of the likelihood marijuana will be legalized at the state level. He said he was worried about the commercialization of cannabis as a matter of safety for the children of the town, its possible effect on the mental health and development of children and the economics of the societal impacts.

"If anything, we want to preempt it," he told the council. "If you get into the figures, you can tell it's a loser."

Gasparovic said legalization of recreational marijuana, which he called a "toxic threat," is about rate of return, market share and dollars in the bank but does not take into consideration the cost to the people who use it and the communities in which they live.

Recreational marijuana laws in some states, such as Colorado, contain provisions that allow municipalities to opt out.

Town Attorney Alex Intermill said this follows the precedent of parts of Kentucky and Tennessee, which remained dry after alcohol prohibition was lifted.

"I wouldn't be surprised if there was a local option," he said.

Coalition members have said they hope other municipalities and Madison County, as a whole, will follow suit.

Coalition member Bill Hutton sent with Gasparovic a letter endorsing the ordinance on behalf of the South Madison Community Schools board of trustees. The letter noted that any law is likely to include an age limit, much like alcohol is limited to people ages 21 and older, but that it's likely to have little practical effect if marijuana is readily available.

"That limitation has not kept students from smoking cigarettes or smoking alcohol," the letter said.

Before voting in favor of the ordinance, Town Council member Bob Jones said what he found most persuasive was the demonstrated effect on the health and well-being of children.

"You're sending a clear statement that Pendleton isn't going to tolerate that," he said.

Jones said by approving the ordinance, there also is a possibility lawmakers at the state level may prevent the legalization of marijuana.

Homelessness
Steps forward last week, but a longer path ahead

OUR VIEW

Last week brought to mind the words of Thomas Paine, who was addressing the future of a yet-to-be-born nation.

Paine wrote "These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of their country; but he that stands by it now, deserves the love and thanks of man and woman."

If the response of elected officials, community volunteers and the more than 30 people who showed up last night at The Salvation Army to learn about how to become official volunteers is any indicator, this is not a community of summer soldiers and sunshine patriots.

It was Thursday, Nov. 7, when government officials in the county learned The Salvation Army wouldn't open its warming shelter that night, which it had done in previous years when the forecast was predicted to be below 32 degrees.

It was the next morning when City of Madison officials became aware of the situation. By that afternoon Madison Mayor Bob Courtney had organized an emergency meeting with the county's emergency management agency director, Troy Morgan, and city department heads to find a way to provide temporary shelter for those who had no shelter from the cold.

The city's warming station was opened that night as a temporary shelter from the cold and remained so through Monday night as another emergency meeting was set up for Tuesday afternoon to find a longer-term solution.

The biggest question of the hour when the Tuesday meeting convened was "how did this happen?"

Lts. Justin and Stephanie Hartley, who came to the Madison facility a few months ago, and some of their colleagues from the Army's headquarters in Indianapolis told the group the facility here in Madison is not set up to be a shelter, and, there are Salvation Army national rules and regulations they must follow for an official shelter.

It is unfortunate the Hartleys and the community had not yet had time to know each other and work together. It is troubling that the policies of recent years do not meet the standards the Hartleys now face.

What's most unfortunate of all is that the Hartleys did not communicate with local officials and community groups before the day temperatures were set to plummet.

But, as Mayor Courtney ably guided the group, the talk started to turn from a who's-to-blame to what-do-we-do.

The Salvation Army representatives explained the building itself isn't the only challenge. They need volunteers and those volunteers must go through special training and certification to work with the people who come into their facility asking for help.

Before that part of the discussion ended, Lt. Stephanie had offered to have the year ahead considered as a "provisional year" and attempt to open some shelter areas if the Army could get volunteer and resource help.

Lt. Justin told The Madison Courier that the Madison operation has an annual budget of about $350,000 and a $45,000 United Way grant that enables programs and help for children, families and individuals in need as well as providing breakfast and lunch Monday through Friday. It receives no government money at either the federal, state or local level.

He said the overnight warming station trigger was changed in Madison two or three years ago to 32 degrees by 5 p.m., which resulted last winter in overnight shelter operations through most of January and half of February. That requires specially trained volunteers and workers and supplies.

Carol Marsh, who has worked for The Salvation Army here for many years and handles the intake when people come in seeking help, observed that most of the homelessness in this community is now related to drugs.

Marsh's comments were not four hours old when David Sutter, the county prosecutor, went before the Jefferson County Council that evening to get council blessing on a grant he has written seeking to add another prosecutor to his staff to deal only with drug cases. Sutter provided documentation of 500% and 600% increases since 2014 in methamphetamine-related or possession-of-syringe cases. Ask Jefferson County Sheriff Dave Thomas or Madison Police Chief Jeremey Perkins about the increase in drug-related offenses. Talk to Jefferson County's commissioners or council members who are working their way toward a new jail. Or, regularly read Record pages in The Madison Courier.

That's not to imply all the people who seek help from The Salvation Army are addicted to drugs. Marsh also cited the struggles of veterans and the folks who just find themselves in unexpected tough circumstances.

But, it is also to point out that when an adult falls through the cracks and needs help for whatever reason, there may be children and other family who had depended on that adult and no longer can, which causes the problem to spiral.

The country is struggling with how to deal with homelessness. The National Coalition Against Homelessness estimates that 12% of Indiana residents experienced homeless from 2014 to 2018.

Homelessness is not only a problem, it is also a symptom of more basic conditions such as mental health issues, drug abuse and poverty that affect many, if not all, in our community, not just those that are homeless. These problems are OUR problems and require a community-wide effort to improve. It is not the Salvation Army's and it cannot be left to our local governments to solve. We as a community must be part of the solution.

This community took reasoned and compassionate first steps this week. Let's continue on the path.

Teachers ask public to support rally for schools

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To the editor:

On Nov. 19, 2019, supporters of public education will peacefully assemble in Indianapolis to express concerns to our elected officials about the continuous lack of funding for public schools. Ninety percent of all Hoosier students attend public schools (source: IDOE), yet funding for public school districts will only increase by approximately 2%. The reality is that 60 out of 289 public school districts will receive less money in 2020 and 2021 (source: Vic's Statehouse notes #337). The legislature must fund ALL public schools at a level that allows for innovative educational programs that promote learning and increased knowledge, as well as social and emotional health for our Hoosier students.

The state is spending over $100 million on standardized testing (ISTEP, ILEARN, IREAD), but ranks 47th in the country for per student funding (source: NEA report). Indiana also ranks 51st in the country (including D.C.) for teacher salary increases over the last 15 years (source: Forbes April 2019). We want LESS money spent on testing and MORE money spent on student learning and the people that promote learning. We want funding that allows public school districts to pay a living wage to bus drivers, custodians, cafeteria workers, counselors, secretaries, librarians, instructional support personnel, teachers, and anyone else that impacts the learning environment in a positive way. We want teachers recognized and treated as professionals capable of deciding the best professional development activities that will benefit their students.

We will take this message to our legislators on TUESDAY, NOV. 19TH. If you support public schools, have children in public schools, or friends/relatives that work in public schools then we ask you to stand with us. Please join us in spreading our message and in our fight to acquire appropriate funding for our public schools. COME TO INDY! If you cannot come, then wear red on Nov. 19th to support the RED for ED movement. The 90% of Hoosier students attending public schools deserve fully funded educational opportunities. The future of Indiana is in our classrooms and funding at an acceptable level will be funding Indiana's future.

Resolution adopted by Madison School Board Thursday

Madison Consolidated School Corporation
Board of School Trustees
Resolution No. 2019-11136

November 13, 2019

The Board of School Trustees recognizes the importance of high quality teachers in every one of our classrooms. We also recognize the limited availability of high-quality teachers due to the current teacher shortage Indiana is currently experiencing. That shortage of teachers is due, in no small measure, to the actions the Indiana Legislature took in the past regarding teacher contracts and compensation models. In addition, the Indiana Legislature has not provided an adequate funding formula that will allow school districts across Indiana to, at the very least, match cost of living increases for the past several years.

On November 19, 2019, teachers across Indiana will converge at the Indiana Statehouse to remind the gathered legislators that increased funding for public education is needed and that the needs of Indiana's children are being met by classroom teachers every day across the State. These legislators have frequently verbally supported teachers but have not followed through with substantive increases in funding that recognizes the importance of the work done by the teachers in Indiana ... but rather has focused on punitive and ineffective testing measures while at the same time increased funding to charter schools and the voucher system that has provided dubious outcomes at best. Once again, we call upon the Indiana Legislature to end their punitive and ineffective testing scheme. We call upon the Indiana Legislature to fund Indiana's public education system in a manner that recognizes the vital role it plays in preserving the future well-being of our state and country.

The Madison Consolidated School support the efforts of our teachers to be heard during the Red for Ed Rally in Indianapolis. That support includes expressed Board approval of the following:

- The use of an eLearning Day in which our students can choose to attend school or stay home to do their eLearning lessons;
- Using a school bus to transport our participating teachers to the rally; and,
- Allowing the teachers who go to Indianapolis on November 19, 2019 to use a professional leave day.
- Board members will be attending the Rally as well.

Unanimously Adopted on November 13, 2019 by Board members Rob Kring, Larry Henry, Jodi Yancey, Jeanne Dugle and Joyce Imel

OBITUARIES

Michael Brierly

Michael Joseph Brierly, 48, of Milton, Kentucky, died Sunday, Nov. 10, 2019, at Kings Daughter's Health in Madison, Indiana.

He was born Jan. 18, 1971, to Robert Joseph Brierly and Linda Temple Huff. He loved his family, loved a good joke and had a quick comeback to any comment he didn't agree with. He enjoyed watching movies and TV, especially Jeopardy, and would compete victoriously against the other contestants. He was also known to have a shot of whiskey now and then and was quite the prankster. He was proud of his daughters and his grandchildren and couldn't help but smile when their names were mentioned.

Survivors include his mother; daughters, Matasha Uribe of Prestonburg, Kentucky, and Megan Chaffins of Paintsville, Kentucky; a sister, Melissa Brierly Kandall of Milton, and six grandchildren and many family and friends.

He was preceded in death by his father; a brother, Gregory Allen Brierly, and an infant granddaughter, Kylie Chaffins.

Cremation was chosen. Ransdell Funeral Home in Bedford Kentucky is in charge of the arrangements.

Online condolence may be made at www.ransdellfuneral.com

Betty Cox

Betty Jean Smith Cox, 92, of Madison, Indiana, and formerly of Franklin, Indiana, died Tuesday, Nov. 12, 2019, at her home in Madison.

She was born Nov. 14, 1926, in Franklin to Otto C. Smith Sr. and Hazel Marie Mitchell Smith. She was a 1945 graduate of Franklin High School and married George B. Cox in 1946. They had one daughter and settled south of Franklin where they farmed together all their life. She raised chickens and sold eggs throughout the Shiloh Community and they owned Maynard's Mums for several years. She enjoyed talking to everyone who came to buy flowers and vegetables. After her husband died in 1983 she worked in the cafeteria at Needham Elementary School. She was a long-time and faithful member of Shiloh Community Church where she joyfully served where she was needed. She moved to Madison in 1997 to be closer to her family and enjoyed worshipping in several area Baptist churches as long as her health permitted. She was a member of RSVP and especially enjoyed making baby hats for newborns at King's Daughters' Hospital and sock monkeys for many young children. She loved being outside mowing her lawn, growing flowers and vegetables, working jigsaw puzzles, quilting and being with her family. She lived each day by her personal motto "Busy people are happy people."

Survivors include a daughter, Ann DeMoss of Madison; a grandson, Justin DeMoss of Loveland, Ohio; a granddaughter, Katie DeMoss Dankel of Erlanger, Kentucky; her brother, Les Smith of North Little Rock, Arkansas; and four great-grandchildren, other relatives and close friend Wilma Sullivan.

She was preceded in death by her parents; husband; and brothers Otto C. Smith Jr. and Walter Smith.

Funeral services will be 1 p.m. Monday, Nov. 18, 2019, at the Shiloh Community Church in Franklin with interment at Second Mount Pleasant Cemetery in Franklin.

Visitation will be from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 17 at Morgan & Nay Funeral Centre in Madison, Indiana, and from 11 a.m. until services Monday at the church.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Shiloh Community Church or Hospice of King's Daughters' Health.

Cards are available at the Morgan & Nay Funeral Centres of Madison and Hanover. Online condolences, www.morgan-nay.com

Holcomb shares teacher concerns, doesn't criticize closings

By TOM DAVIES
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Indiana Gov. Eric Holcomb isn't promising any quick action in response to educators who want more teacher pay, but says he shares their concerns and respects the decisions of school districts calling off classes for a Statehouse rally next week.

Thousands of educators will be calling for the further boost in pay Tuesday. Teacher unions say at least 107 school districts with some 460,000 students — or more than 40% of statewide enrollment — are expected to be closed that day while their teachers attend the event.

Holcomb said it is fully up to school districts if they want to close the day of the union-organized rally.

"Those are local decisions that are being made school corporation by school corporation," Holcomb said this week. "I do applaud teachers for expressing their voice. I share their concern."

Numerous school district officials say they've decided to shut their doors because so many teachers requested personal time off for the rally that they wouldn't be able to find enough substitute teachers to cover classrooms. But they also say they support the push by teachers for a bigger boost in school funding and their grievances on other issues.

Leaders of the state's two main teacher unions project that 10,000 or more teachers could attend the rally dubbed "Red for Ed Action Day" as members of the Republican-dominated Legislature are gathering for organizational meetings ahead of their 2020 session that starts in early January.

Jennifer Smith-Margraf, the Indiana State Teachers Association's vice president, said teachers know some parents are upset over the school closures, but that educators want more urgency from state officials.

"We've been doing all the steps that we're supposed to be doing — writing emails, sending postcards, calling our legislators, meeting with them individually, going to town halls and asking about education in public forums," said Smith-Margraf, a high school Spanish teacher from Lafayette. "We've been doing all of those things and we haven't seen resolution to these very serious issues that we have."

Large protests have come elsewhere amid a wave of teacher activism that began last year in West Virginia and spread to other states, including Kentucky, Oklahoma and Arizona. The American Federation of Teachers national president is expected at Tuesday's Indiana rally, according to the union.

Indiana Democrats and teacher unions panned the new state budget approved by Republicans in April that boosted base school spending by 2.5% each of the next two years.

Holcomb and GOP legislative leaders touted the plan as making strides toward improving teacher pay. But they faced criticism for not directing some of the state's $2 billion in cash reserves toward schools.

The Republican governor said he was waiting for a teacher pay commission he appointed in February to make recommendations on increasing salaries by the end of 2020.

"We are going to have a gap, still, to fill," Holcomb said. "That teacher pay commission is what I am going to be paying very close attention to, that menu of options on how to bridge that gap."

Education advocacy groups estimated this year a 9% funding increase was needed to boost average teacher pay to the midpoint of Indiana's neighboring states. Republican state schools Superintendent Jennifer McCormick has cited a study showing Indiana as the state with the lowest teacher salary increases since 2002.

Districts closing Tuesday range from urban ones in Indianapolis, Evansville, South Bend and Hammond to small rural districts such as the 380-student Tri-Township Consolidated Schools in northern Indiana's LaPorte County.

"A strong show of support for our local teachers and all educators across our state is certainly a worthy cause," Tri-Township Superintendent Kelly Shepherd said in a letter to parents. "Our students will benefit greatly in the long run if a cohesive and united message is presented to our state legislators."

School districts looking to continue with classes Tuesday are struggling with how to cover their classrooms. Fort Wayne Community Schools had day-off requests from about 650 of its 1,825 teachers as of Wednesday afternoon but still planned to keep schools open, district spokeswoman Krista Stockman said.

The teacher unions are also pushing for a rollback in the use of student test scores to evaluate teachers and schools after lower scores on the state's new ILEARN standardized exam taken last spring. They also want the repeal of new license requirements pushed through by Republican legislators this year requiring teachers to log 15 hours of professional development regarding the needs of local employers.

Holcomb said he would detail legislative proposals in early December and that he heard teachers "loud and clear."

"One thing I hear from teachers and agree with, quite frankly, is we need some continuity, some consistency, so that this is not a hodge-podge year after year where we're changing back and forth, back and forth," he said.

Let Us Pause to Honor the Memory of

Mrs. Betty Jean Smith Cox

Mrs. Betty Jean Smith Cox, age 92, of Madison, Indiana formerly of Franklin was born on November 14, 1926 in Franklin, Indiana. She was the daughter of the late Otto C., Smith Sr. and Hazel Marie Mitchell Smith. Betty was a 1945 graduate of Franklin High School. On July 1, 1946, she was united in marriage to George B. Cox in Milton, Kentucky and they shared 37 years together until his death on December 28, 1983, together they had one daughter, Ann. George and Betty settled south of Franklin and farmed together all their married life. Betty raised chickens and sold eggs throughout the Shiloh Community. They owned Maynard's Mums for several years and enjoyed talking to everyone who came to buy flowers and vegetables. After George's death, Betty worked in the cafeteria at Needham Elementary School. She was a long time and faithful member of Shiloh Community Church where she joyfully served where she was needed. Betty moved to Madison in 1997 to be closer to her family. She enjoyed worshiping in several area Baptist churches as long as her health permitted. She was a member of RSVP and especially enjoyed making baby hats for the newborns at King's Daughters' Hospital and sock monkeys for many young children. She loved being outside mowing her lawn, growing flowers and vegetables, working jigsaw puzzles, quilting and being with her family. Rykers Ridge VFD to unveil new $400,000 firehouse Sunday

By COLLIN OVERTON
Courier Staff Writer

Local residents will get to see the inside the newly completed Rykers Ridge Volunteer Fire Company firehouse when the department holds an open house for the community on Sunday afternoon.

The $405,000 project has been in the works for years with construction beginning in the spring at the exact site of their demolished old firehouse.

According to Rykers Ridge Fire Chief Art Peters, the actual build took about four months but the department started planning for the upgrade long before that.

David Smith, the department's treasurer, said they started saving 25 to 30 years ago.

"We'd just stash a little here and there, and you know, put them on CDs and forget about them," Smith said. "And we would use it for big purchases but kept in mind that we wanted to build a new building."

On Sunday from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. residents can tour that new station, visit with firefighters and enjoy refreshments.

"We've got more space now than we had before, and it's going to help the whole neighborhood have a better place for them to use, if they choose to," Peters said.

Organized in the early 1960s by area farmers and incorporated on March 16, 1965, the fire company serves Madison Township outside the Madison city limits from Rykers' Ridge Elementary School to Highway 600 at the water tower near Kent. The Madison Township Volunteer Fire Company followed in the 1980s, Smith said.

Smith said the department first started taking calls out of the "Firebarn," a 36-by-50-foot building that housed all equipment and included a meeting room, but they soon outgrew that and built another structure in 1979.

He said they have never had a separate room for an office — firefighters took a closet with double doors and made it into a makeshift working space — and the company's four fire trucks couldn't be parked side-by-side, as is the practice in most firehouses, but in front of each other due to a lack of space.

Still, the department made do while continuing to stash away cash. Eight years ago they revisited the idea of building a new firehouse, drew up a plan and were ready to go. However, they decided to forgo the process of applying for grants in favor of better-controlling costs by raising the money themselves.

"Kind of like Deputy, when we found out how much it was going to cost using grants and stuff, we decided we didn't want to do that, so we said 'We'll just wait,'" Smith noted.

They continued business as usual but sent out letters every year asking the community for donations, which they still do, while watching their nest egg grow. In the end they had to borrow about $100,00 for the project and if donations continue to come in like they have historically, the department should be able to cover about half their annual mortgage with those donations, Smith said.

The new firehouse includes two office areas, a bigger and better kitchen, a room and bigger garage for truck storage so that they can all be parked side-by-side.

The facility also has more room for families and groups who reserve the firehouse for holiday dinners and gatherings, as well as a better facility for voters when the firehouse is used as a polling place during elections, Smith added.

"It's a place people in the community make use of," he said.

Beshear tells Ky. teachers help on the way

By BRUCE SCHREINER
Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Ky. — On election night, long before his win in the Kentucky governor's race became official, Democrat Andy Beshear made clear who he thought helped make it happen.

"To our educators, this is your victory," Beshear proclaimed in a Nov., 5 victory speech as he maintained a slim 5,000-vote margin.

Now that Republican Gov. Matt Bevin has conceded, Beshear is moving quickly to translate the political activism of teachers that began in 2018 and persisted through this year's election into tangible school improvements.

Teachers staged large demonstrations at Kentucky's Capitol in Frankfort the past two years as part of a national wave of teacher activism. Many of the teachers who chanted "We'll remember in November" during their statehouse protests in Kentucky later remobilized as part of a vast grassroots effort on Beshear's behalf.

Beshear, who capitalized on the teachers' feud with Bevin over pension and education policies, is starting work on his promises to educators as he prepares a budget plan to submit to the GOP-dominated legislature in early 2020. The cornerstone is a $2,000 pay raise for public school teachers — an incentive he said is needed to resolve a statewide teacher shortage.

"We are always going to lead with our values of public education, health care, good jobs that pay good wages and ensuring that we fully fund our pensions," Beshear said Friday in outlining his budget plans for the coming year.

Lt. Gov.-elect Jacqueline Coleman, an educator, made a pitch for the teacher pay raise at the same Friday event, where Beshear announced transition teams.

"Our children deserve a top-notch education," she said. "It's time that our educators are treated with respect and, more appropriately, compensated for their dedication to our children."

Education may be one area where Beshear can find common ground with Republicans, though it won't be easy. Kentucky House Majority Floor Leader John "Bam" Carney recently listed education as a top priority for House Republicans. As for Beshear's proposed teacher pay raise, he said: "It's easy to say that when you're on the campaign trail, but the reality is you've got to be able to have the funds to pay for that. We would love to do that if we can."

Beshear also has proposed shrinking class sizes, expanding preschool and increasing mental health services for children.

On Friday, Beshear reiterated his intention to reshape the Kentucky Board of Education with new appointees.

Twitter details new ban on political ads

By BARBARA ORTUTAY
AP Technology Writer

Twitter says its new ban on political ads will cover appeals for votes, solicitations for campaign contributions and any political content.

Twitter is defining political content to include any ad that references a candidate, political party, government official, ballot measure, or legislative or judicial outcome. The ban also applies to all ads — even non-political ones — from candidates, political parties and elected or appointed government officials.

However, Twitter is allowing ads related to social causes such as climate change, gun control and abortion. People and groups running such ads won't be able to target those ads down to a user's ZIP code or use political categories such as "conservative" or "liberal." Rather, targeting must be kept broad, such as based on a user's state or province.

News organizations will be exempt so they can promote stories that cover political issues.

Twitter announced its ban on political ads last month, but didn't release details until Friday. The policy is in stark contrast to Facebook's approach of allowing political ads, even if they contain false information. Facebook has said it wants to provide politicians with a "level playing field" for communication and not intervene when they speak, regardless of what they're saying.

Drew Margolin, a Cornell University communications professor who studies social networks, said Twitter's broad ban is a reflection that "vetting is not realistic and is potentially unfair."

He said a TV network might be in a position to vet all political ads, but Twitter and Facebook cannot easily do so. While their reliance on automated systems makes online ads easier and cheaper to run, Margolin said it also makes them an "attractive target" for spreading misinformation.

an explanation for the missing funds.

Eventually, Makowsky asked Downey how much money was missing and she told him she "did not know." He asked if she had taken any money prior to 2014 and she said she "didn't think so" and that she "did not remember if she ever put any money back," the affidavit said.

At that point Downey said she did not want to speak to Makowsky any further. They set up a time to meet the following day but prior to that Downey notified Makowsky that she did not want to meet with him further.

Autumn Dean, an accountant with Hartman and Williams LLC, completed an audit of the records at Pawlak Orthodontics and, based on a summary between the Ortho-trac and Quickbooks records, $292,251.32 was found missing between 2014 and 2019, the affidavit said.

Dean's report indicated that a sample comparison of Ortho-Trac entries made under Downey's login credentials compared to payments recorded in Quickbooks from 2015 to 2019 showed that payments were recorded in Ortho-Trac but not in Quickbooks and that $74,078.00 was missing in Quickbooks. Additional transactions still are being scrutinized.

The investigation led to Wednesday's warrant issued for Downey's arrest on the Level 5 felony charge of theft (over $50,000). She was booked at the Jefferson County Jail and later released on bond.

Pawlak has since issued a statement to reassure patients that the thefts that are charged were from Pawlak and not customers.

"We at Pawlak Orthodontics want to thank our patients for being dedicated to our office. We appreciate the loyalty you have shown us. We have had an unfortunate situation occur. A former employee has been charged with theft of funds from our office. We want to assure everyone that this has not affected any patient's accounts. These were cash-only payments and only affected the bottom line for Dr. Pawlak.

"We want to assure everyone that we have taken measures to make sure that something like this will not occur again. Again, we sincerely appreciate the support and patience we have received from everyone while we deal with this issue."

programs that promote learning and increased knowledge, as well as social and emotional health for our Hoosier students."

The educators also noted that the state is spending $100 million on standardized testing, but ranks 47th in the country for per-student funding. Indiana also ranks 51st in the country for teacher salary increases over the last 15 years, they said, citing Forbes.

As of Nov. 9, more than 75 teachers from Madison and Southwestern schools had signed up to attend the rally.

In other business at Wednesday's meeting the board agreed to rename Cub Trail, the roadway behind the school from Wilson Avenue to the nearby neighborhood, as Gallatin Way in honor of former principal, coach and teacher Roger Gallatin.

Gallatin was employed at Madison from 1962 to 1997 and taught industrial arts while coaching football and track from 1966 to 1977. He coached the football team to its only Hoosier Hills Conference Championship in 1973 before serving as assistant principal from 1977 to 1988 and principal from 1988 to 1977. Gallatin is credited with guiding the high school through an extensive remodeling project before retiring.

The school board also officially recognized IHSAA Girls Golf state finalist Keara Eder, a sophomore, and the Marching Cubs and Guard Band, which recently finished third in the ISSMA Scholastic B State Finals.

Clifty Park to close for deer hunt

Courier staff report

Clifty Falls State Park will be closed to the general public Sunday evening through Wednesday morning for Indiana DNR's annual deer population reduction hunt at the site.

The park will close at 4 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 17 and remain closed to the general public through 8 a.m. Wednesday, Nov. 20.

Clifty is among several Indiana state parks that will close for two-day hunts to reduce deer population over the next few weeks.

Indiana DNR biologists evaluate which state park properties require a deer management hunt each year based on habitat recovery and previous harvest rates at each park.

The state parks are home to numerous natural communities that serve as significant habitat. The deer management hunts help control browsing by deer to a level that helps ensure healthy habitat for native plants and animals.

Participating hunters are selected by a draw. Only individuals selected from the draw may participate at any site.

BOYS CROSS COUNTRY RUNNER OF THE YEAR

Sidekick no longer, Smith emerges as Rebels' leader

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

Trevor Smith spent three years playing second fiddle to Bradley Winston on Southwestern's cross country team. Winston was the Rebels' Batman, an elite runner who dominated the conference and sectional, with Smith playing the dutiful role of the sidekick.

It was hard for Smith to shake that mindset — even after Winston graduated and headed to Northern Kentucky University — but an early-season talk with his coach set the Southwestern senior on the right course.

"He's kind of run in Bradley's shadow for his first three years and I think at the beginning of this year, he was looking for Bradley's shadow," Southwestern coach Zac Nussbaum said. "We had a pretty good talk. I told him that we needed him to be the alpha; we can't wait on Bradley to save us in these races. I felt like he really responded well to that."

"You could see it in his face, the difference in the mentality and determination. He just had that determination that 'I'm going to do my part and do my best to get my teammates to follow me.' Instead of being the one following, he was the one out front, trying to get them to come with him. I thought he did a great job."
Southwestern coach Zac Nussbaum

Respond, he did. Smith took the reins of the Southwestern program, leading the Rebels to their fifth-straight Ohio River Valley Conference championship and running his way all the way to the semistate and the Madison Courier's Boys Cross Country Runner of the Year Award.

"I feel pretty good about the season," Smith said. "It was one I won't forget."

Smith's transition from sidekick to hero began at one of the Rebels' biggest meets of the year, the Columbus North Invitational. For the first few weeks of the season, Smith's times were stuck firmly in the 18-minute range. But it was against some of the state's best runners that Smith found that second gear.

"It was the big Columbus North invite which was where I got the low 17s and from there, I knew I could get into the 16s," Smith said. "I broke my (personal best) by 35 seconds and once I found the 16s, it was hard to get out of them."

"You could see it in his face, the difference in the mentality and determination. He just had that determination that 'I'm going to do my part and do my best to get my teammates to follow me,'" Nussbaum said. "Instead of being the one following, he was the one out front, trying to get them to come with him. I thought he did a great job."

For Smith, the difference was mental. The realization that his high school cross country career was close to coming to an end proved to be the biggest motivation that he needed.

"The adrenaline part helped, knowing that it was your last year, and training harder was easier knowing it was my last year," Smith said. "Maybe not easier, but easier mentally to tell yourself to go harder."

That mindset led him to an ORVC championship and a 12th-place finish in the sectional as Southwestern finished third and qualified for the regional. A week later, the Rebels finished seventh as a team and did not advance, but Smith placed 28th to earn a trip to the semistate.

The semistate was held in less than ideal conditions as the remnants of Tropical Storm Oscar drenched the course. Smith ended up running 124th, two positions and seven-tenths of a second behind teammate Gavyn Mundt.

"I didn't know where (Mundt) was; I didn't know where I was until I saw the finish line," Smith said with a laugh. "I got to the point where I knew I wasn't going to make it out and I was like, 'this is my last time going through the finish line, I might as well look around.' So I was

Returners give local teams reason for hope

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

With two returning semistate qualifiers and eight other regional qualifiers, area wrestling teams are expecting good things when the season kicks off next week.

A look at each of the three Courier-area programs:

MADISON

With more than 25 athletes in the weight room, Madison has one of its largest rosters in several years and should be able to fill every weight class this upcoming season.

Among those grapplers are eight returners who reached at least the regional level a year ago, giving the Cubs a talented core on which to build around after going 26-10 last season.

"Our number one goal every season is to fill all of the weights and we have 25-plus kids in the room pushing each other and the energy has been good," Madison coach Tyson Skinner said. "You always like to see more football players give wrestling a try and we currently have two off the football team trying wrestling for the first time."

Teams ready to get wet

COURIER STAFF REPORT

The high school swim season kicks off on Saturday and all three local programs are ready to hit the water.

A look at each of the swim programs:

MADISON

The success of the junior high program as well as the H2O Swim Club has stocked Madison's varsity with talent which should pay off this season.

A total of 31 swimmers (17 boys and 14 girls) are ready to hit the water for the Cubs.

"We are looking forward to picking up where we left off last year with continued success and personal improvements across the board," Madison coach Ashley Schutte said. "We have high expectations for our relay teams, have incredible opportunities with our distance events, and are very hopeful to have state meet representation once again this year."

Cubs' Clare Wilber rides passion for running to Lyon College

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

Clare Wilber did not want to run cross country. Growing up in a family where running is almost a way of life, she wanted no part of the sport when she arrived at Madison Consolidated High School as a freshman four years ago.

Clare's father, Madison cross country Josh Wilber, got her to run with the team over the summer and got her into uniform as the season began. She still wasn't happy, but her feelings were beginning to thaw.

"I actually used to hate running. I got into high school and I was like, I'll try it and see if I'm any good at it," Clare said. "And at the end of my freshman year, I was like, maybe I am good at it. So, now here I am, running in college. It's a pretty exciting day for me."

That distaste for the sport blossomed into a passion and on Monday, the Madison senior officially signed to run cross country and track & field at Lyon College in Batesville, Arkansas.

It was a strange journey for Clare over these past four years and while her father and coach Josh knew she'd make a great runner, he had his doubts as to whether she would stick it out.

"When she came in her freshman year, we ran over the summer and I kind of thought she would give it up, she would quit," Josh Wilber said. "I could tell she wasn't that into it."

What changed was one of those days where nothing seems to go right. A wrong turn by coach Wilber on the way to the race got the Cubs to the Hoosier Hills Conference championship meet at Bedford North Lawrence with just 10 minutes to spare. Rushing off the bus, Clare didn't have any time

Calipari hopes Cats learn from loss to Evansville

By GARY B. GRAVES
AP Sports Writer

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Kentucky coach John Calipari has repeatedly insisted that high early rankings aren't indicative of how much more work his young, talented teams have to put in at this time of the season.

He says it so much it starts to sound like rhetoric, just coach speak. It's likely he has his team's attention now.

The currently No. 1 ranked Wildcats — and that will also likely change when the next Top 25 poll is released — were upset 67-64 by unranked Evansville on Tuesday night. Just a day after being anointed as the nation's top team following impressive opening-week victories over then-No. 1 Michigan State and Eastern Kentucky, the Wildcats (2-1) were outshot, outrebounded and outmuscled on their Rupp Arena floor by the determined Purple Aces.

"This was a great lesson for all of us, including me," Calipari said. "I mean, we could say they got outplayed and I could tell you I got outcoached."

As for his players' psyches, the coach added, "They're hurting and they should be, but my guess is they will learn from this and understand we can't be this way."

The loss ended a 52-game home winning streak against unranked opponents and sent shocked Wildcats fans heading to the exits wondering what had happened.

Not that Kentucky's championship aspirations have disappeared.

A favorable schedule allows the Wildcats time to regroup before facing their next Power Five opponent on Dec. 14 against Georgia Tech. But they demonstrated they can't take any opponent for granted, particularly after 25-point underdog Evansville humbled them on both ends of the court and led for nearly 30 minutes.

Calipari will surely consistently remind them of what can happen if they aren't ready to play — against any opponent.

Despite returning four veterans and welcoming another group of highly-touted freshmen, Kentucky began the season with concerns.

Post depth is one of the biggest challenges the Wildcats will face all season with 6-foot-11 junior Nick Richards and 6-10 sophomore EJ Montgomery the only big men on the roster. Ankle injuries to both haven't helped early on, though Richards has played every game since missing the second exhibition. Montgomery has missed the past two contests and is being evaluated daily.

Even when they're back at full strength, Kentucky's bigs will have to stay out of foul trouble. Its next tallest players are 6-9 forwards Nate Sestina and Ben Jordan — a right-handed pitcher brought over from the baseball team before the season began — and 6-6 Kahlil Whitney.

The Wildcats may have no choice but to play small in stretches.

Calipari also wants them to play tougher.

Evansville outrebounded Kentucky 38-35, including six consecutive boards during one second-half stretch.

"Coach was right, we got out-toughed," Sestina said. "It's a mental thing for me. Just got to be mentally tough late in the game, especially when I'm tired and I wasn't" tough.

Calipari believes several mistakes that led to the loss are correctable, including mental errors. The Wildcats have played at a quick offensive pace, but they also need more control. And they also have to more efficient from the field after finishing below 40% in two of their three contests.

Calipari has always stressed the importance of playing better from February on rather than in November. And that's a good thing because the Wildcats are under greater scrutiny in the aftermath of a defeat that has made them a social media punchline.

"We can't look at it and dwell on it," said freshman guard Tyrese Maxey, whose 3-point attempt with 3 seconds remaining against Evansville fell short. "We have to build on it. Look at it and move forward. It happened and we didn't want that to happen. But hey, we have a long season ahead of us and we're just trying to get back to the grind and move forward."

Marquette knocks off Purdue, 62-55

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Marquette coach Steve Wojciechowski's message to his club at halftime Wednesday night was that it needed to be tougher. It needed to be more physical.

It worked.

Koby McEwen scored a game-high 23 points and the Marquette Golden Eagles rallied from a 13-point halftime deficit to defeat the Purdue Boilermakers 65-55 as part of the annual Gavitt Tipoff Games between the Big Ten and Big East.

Markus Howard added 18 points for Marquette (2-0), which outscored Purdue 40-17 in the second half to capture its first-ever victory against the Boilermakers. The Golden Eagles were 0-9 all-time against Purdue entering the night.

Matt Haarms had 14 points to lead the Boilermakers (1-2) who dropped their second straight game after a season-opening victory against Green Bay.

Purdue, which also got 13 points from Jahaad Proctor, scored the game's first nine points and led by as many as 18. But after trailing 38-25 at halftime, Marquette opened the second half on a 29-14 run and took a 54-52 lead, its first of the night, on a layup by Sacar Anim with 4:43 to go.

The Golden Eagles got key contributions down the stretch, including two free throws and a step-back jumper from Howard and McEwan, who went 6-for-7 from the foul line in the second half.

BIG PICTURE

Purdue, which opened the season as the No. 23-ranked team in the AP poll, now is searching for answers after blowing a huge lead on the road and losing two straight. The Boilermakers shot 9 of 21 from the free-throw line on Wednesday.

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

The Hanover men's soccer team received eight total honors from the Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference on Wednesday.

Josh Hughes, a junior from Lafayette, Louisiana, was named the Offensive Player of the Year — Hanover's second player to earn the award, joining Enrico Franchini in 2015.

Hughes' stellar season saw him tie his goal total from last year with seven while adding nine assists to post a team-high 23 total points on the year, third in the HCAC. Hughes also paced the conference in shots on goal with 30.

Joining Hughes on the HCAC First Team was sophomore Luke Eppler, sophomore Evan Redmon and junior Myles Joseph.

In addition, sophomores Fellipe Busato and Fernando Martin were each named second team all-conference, and junior goalkeeper Will Bedel picked up honorable mention accolades.

Hanover capped off the regular season in style by advancing past Rose-Hulman on penalty kicks to earn a berth into the NCAA Tournament. The Panthers will begin postseason play on Saturday when they take on Rochester (N.Y.) in the first round at Kenyon, Ohio.

Women's soccer nabs 8

The Hanover women's soccer team received eight total honors from the HCAC.

Sophomores Autumn Boothby and Ruby Kate Gray, and senior Lizzie Matchett were all named HCAC first team selections — the first selection to an all-conference team for all three Panthers.

Josie Dattilo was named to Freshman of the Year honors as well as being named to the HCAC second team. She is the second consecutive freshman of the year award winner for Hanover, joining goalie Amanda Carmosino, and the sixth under head coach Jim Watts.

Joining Dattilo on the second team are sophomore Kelsey Hughes and senior Brandi Brock. Sophomore Anna Smith was named honorable mention.

Hanover was 11-6-2 overall, 7-1-1 HCAC this season.

Volleyball gets four

Four Hanover volleyball players were honored by the HCAC on Monday.

Sophomores Kelsey Ketcham and Emma Rolf, and senior Ally Williams were each named to the HCAC first team, while freshman Adrianne Vance was named honorable mention as well as part of the all-freshman team.

Hanover was 8-11 overall, 7-2 HCAC this season.

Nwora leads Cards past Sycamores

By GARY B. GRAVES
AP Sports Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Louisville coach Chris Mack couldn't find any fault with his team's performance against Indiana State.

The Cardinals started off hot from the field and cooled only slightly. When the Sycamores mounted their lone rally in the second half, Mack kept his head during a timeout. Louisville answered with a flourish on both ends to finish Wednesday night's win.

Jordan Nwora scored 21 points, Dwayne Sutton added 14 and the fourth-ranked Cardinals shot 59% from the field to beat Indiana State 91-62.

Two days after moving up a spot in the AP Top 25, the Cardinals (3-0) made 14 of their first 17 shots for a 16-point lead through 11 minutes on the way to a 47-26 advantage at the break. Nwora's 14 points, including a pair of 3s, got Louisville going, and Sutton had 10 before the break.

Nwora, a junior forward, finished 5 of 10 shooting for his third consecutive game of 20 points or more. Sutton and Steven Enoch each grabbed 10 rebounds as Louisville owned the glass 42-21. The Cardinals shot above 50% for the third consecutive game and made 9 of 17 from long range.

Freshman Samuell Williamson added 15 points and five rebounds and graduate transfer Lamarr "Fresh" Kimble scored 13 as Louisville's reserves outscored ISU's bench 36-20.

"(Mack) just wants to make sure we share the ball, get the ball to the paint," said Sutton, who posted his first double-double this season and sixth of his career. "When we shoot 3s, we like to have the ball touch the paint first, so you get wide-open looks. For the most part, we did that."

Tyreke Key led the Sycamores (0-2) with 20 points including four 3-pointers, two of which came during a 14-2 early second-half run that got them within 51-40. They got no closer as Louisville quickly answered to stretch the lead above 20 as it shot 58% in the final 20 minutes.

"Really pleased with our response from Sunday," said Mack, referring to Louisville's 78-55 win over Youngstown State. "I thought we played a pretty complete game. I felt that Indiana State's guards, namely Key and (Jordan) Barnes, really attack the lane. We did a pretty good job on those guys for most of the game.

"We just wanted to keep the ball out of the lane. I thought our big guys did a great job hedging ball screens and keeping that lane as clean as we have all year. Really pleased with our rebounding difference, to double them on the glass."

Indiana State had two scoring droughts of at least three minutes and shot 34% in its only game this season against a Power Five opponent. The Sycamores haven't beaten a ranked opponent since topping Butler 72-71 in December 2016.

Louisville made sure Indiana State wouldn't have a chance at the upset.

"I don't think we were nearly resilient enough, and they got right in the flow real quick," Indiana State coach Greg Lansing said. "They were ready to go. I thought we'd fight them a little harder there at the start. We let them get comfortable right away."

BIG PICTURE

Indiana State: After making two of their first three baskets, the Sycamores were no match physically against Louisville's taller lineup. Perimeter shooting was a bright spot as they extended their streak to 345 games with at least one 3-pointer.

Louisville: The Cardinals seemingly couldn't miss at the start and stayed hot throughout. They never let up even after the outcome was settled.

•Swimming

two events for Madison last season, but she has headed back to her native Argentina. But a young group of Cubs are ready to take her place.

On the boys side, sophomores Carter Schutte and Jack Kelsey both played a part of relay teams that made the sectional finals last season while seniors Bladyn Cardinal and Carson Denton, and juniors Trenton Schmidt and Casey Anderson also had strong seasons.

"A number of these young men have swam together year round and the competition level with the boys is different — the intensity of the workouts will benefit our entire team," Ashley Schutte said. "They know going in they are going to have to work harder and harder to keep their relay positions, which is a great motivator for all of them and puts our team in the best possible position for success."

On the girls side, seniors Anne Marie Grady and Lucy Lynch, junior Kathryn Royce and sophomore Tabetha Jameison are the top returners.

"We have a number of ladies returning as seasoned swimmers, each one of them has the technical foundation for a solid season," Ashley Schutte said. "We have a few new swimmers who are coming along nicely, and a very talented freshman class who I expect will contribute immediately to our team's success. We will have lots of flexibility when it comes to events and I anticipate switching around things often so that as we approach the end of the season, we will have found everyone's groove."

Madison opens the season at the New Albany Relays on Tuesday. The Cubs' first home meet will be Nov. 26 when they host Hoosier Hills Conference rival Seymour.

SOUTHWESTERN

Southwestern returns several swimmers who should have good seasons.

On the boys side, Ethan Besse, Caleb Geary, Ethan Stewart and Andrew Stoner, all juniors, accounted for all of Southwestern's points during the sectional a year ago.

On the girls side, sophomore Julia Worcester had a breakout freshman campaign while junior Belle Crawford and sophomore Trinity Stoner also had strong seasons.

Southwestern opens the season Saturday at New Albany. The Rebels then compete in the New Albany Relays on Tuesday.

SWITZERLAND CO.

Switzerland County will feature a pair of swimmers who are already two of the best in the young history of the Pacer program.

Senior Ally Furnish holds the school record in every girls event while sophomore Adrian Armstrong set every individual record on the boys side last season.

"Ally brings a positive attitude and leadership to our team. Not only is she a top notch athlete she is also tops in her class in grades," Switzerland coach Eric Cole said. "Last year as a freshman, (Armstrong) set every individual record for Switzerland County. This year, with a larger team, he is setting his sights on helping the team establish new relay records."

Switzerland opens the season on Tuesday at South Dearborn. The Pacers then host Providence and South Ripley on Monday, Nov. 25.

just seeing what it was like, examining everything.

"It was one I won't forget. Semistate was the worst race I've ever run in," Smith added. "There was three inches of water everywhere."

"It's hard when you get to that level and weather becomes a factor. You'd like it to be a beautiful day. But everybody had to run in the same conditions," Nussbaum said. "I almost felt like we should have practiced some swimming before the race began. If you're not going to go on, it's not a bad way to go out with a race that memorable."

His cross country career may be over, but Smith is already transitioning into his next sport. He will play basketball for the Rebels this winter and baseball in the spring and of course, he'll also run track & field with designs at not only a school record, but a state finals berth as well. After graduation, he's looking at Vincennes University where he can major in diesel or automotive mechanics and possibly run for the Trailblazers.

"I really have some high hopes for him this track season. I'd like to see his two-mile get down where somebody can throw some money at him," Nussbaum said. "I think he can be on the school-record 4x16. So I have some high hopes and I'm expecting him to go on and run. The longer the distance, the better of a runner he'll be, with the way he's built. If he ever decides to be a marathoner, he'll be great at it."

to think about the race ahead.

"She forgot her running shorts and she's wearing just normal shorts, and she just runs and she stops thinking about it. And she runs a low 22 and we're like, where did that come from?" Josh Wilber said with a laugh. "It renewed that passion in her, but what really charged her up and got her going was getting to semistate. She took that momentum into sectionals, then at regional she ran with abandon and was able to be the 10th runner out, that's when it really clicked."

Over the next four years, Clare emerged as one of the Cubs' go-to runners. And although her times continued to drop, she never got back to the semistate race.

This past year, Clare finished 34th in the regional at Columbus North, missing the semistate by just nine seconds.

"I'm proud of myself. I had kind of an injury this season and it affected me a little bit, and it was kind of disappointing. In the end, I accepted it," Clare Wilber said. "I made it to semistate my freshman year and I progressively got better, but it sucks that I didn't make it to semistate again. But my times were dropping and I achieved everything I think I could have."

"You have to want it and want to work hard toward it and I think she's the spitting image of that," Josh Wilber said. "She worked really hard in the offseason and always trying to get better every year. And that's what it takes. If you really want to go to the next level and to get a scholarship, that's what you need to do."

Lyon coach Adam Trausch made the trip from Arkansas to be on hand for his newest runner's signing ceremony and is excited for what lies ahead.

"She's run some great times and from the great state of Indiana where there are some tough runners," Trausch said. "We're a really good academic school and she has some really great academic scores as well. We thought she was a great fit, academically and athletically. We felt like she can develop here and contribute to our team right away.

"I envision her being in our top five on our cross country team and being able to score some points in both indoor and outdoor track."

Clare plans to major in biology with an eye toward pre-med and said that Lyon was the perfect fit for her.

"I was looking for the academics and it was just a plus that it's a great coach and a great running program as well," said Clare, who also looked at Kentucky Christian and Saint-Mary-of-the-Woods. "I've got a great coach who I think can push me to get into the 19s, that's where I want to be and hopefully in the low 19s by the end of my college career. That's what I want to achieve."

For Josh Wilber, the day was twice as exciting. While it's fun to see one of your athletes move on to the next level, it's not very often it's your own child.

"This was a day I think she's dreamed about for a while and for it to really come true and it's real," Josh Wilber said. "I couldn't be more proud."

The top Cub to watch is senior Tucker Adams, who recovered from a broken hand last year to go 20-7 at 220 pounds and reach the semistate.

Seven other wrestlers reached the regional round: Kelsey Bilz (34-14) at 113; Noah Burkhardt (34-10) at 12; Jacob McRoberts (32-10) at 126 pounds; Luke McCarty (31-16) at 145; Mason Long (15-9) at 152; Dalton Berry (34-11) at 182; and Dylan Fulton (32-12) at heavyweight.

In addition, Madison has a large freshman class with nine wrestlers ready to make an impact.

"Madison wrestling is a family. We try to teach the kids about the history of this program so they will become the future," Skinner said. "I would venture to say we are the only sport at the high school that can say their entire coaching staff competed for Madison. We all have a vested interest to see this program thrive."

Madison opens the season on Monday at Southwestern. The Cubs then compete in the Friday Night Duals at Switzerland County on Friday, Nov. 22.

Madison will not wrestle at home until Dec. 3 when the Cubs host Batesville.

SOUTHWESTERN

Southwestern may be low on numbers but the Rebels will be high on talent this year after going 17-12 a year ago.

Southwestern returns three regional qualifiers, led by 120-pound junior Cameron Canada, who was 24-8 last season and reached the semistate. Junior Brady McLain went 19-18 at 160 pounds and senior Mitchell Adcock was 21-5 at 182 pounds as both reached the regional round.

The Rebels have 12 wrestlers total on the roster, seven of whom are either freshmen or sophomores.

Southwestern opens the season at home against Madison on Monday. The Rebels then compete in a three-way meet at Scottsburg on Saturday, Nov. 23.

SWITZERLAND CO.

Switzerland County is ready to build on a 10-18 campaign a season ago with several wrestlers who could make a splash this year.

Austin Wolf became just the third outright regional qualifier in school history after going 22-12 last year at 126 pounds. Jacob Wolf was 23-7 at 132 pounds and will be a regional threat while Tyler Lieland was 16-11 at 195 points and Alex Boggs was 11-11 at 220.

Two newcomers, heavyweight Mike Galbreath and 106-pounder Wyldon Washnock, will strengthen the Pacers' roster.

"We worked hard on the off-season to improve ourselves mentally and physically," Switzerland coach David Wolf said. "If we can stay healthy, we should have a good season."

Switzerland opens the season on Friday, Nov. 22 when it hosts Madison and two others for the Friday Night Quads. The Pacers then host New Washington on Dec. 4.

‘Holiday Inn’ with MCHS Theatre

Students perform second play of the season

“Holiday Inn” is scheduled for more three performances at North Madison Christian Church. Show times are 2:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 16 and 2:30 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 17. Tickets are available at the door. Cost is $12 for adults and $7 for students. In addition, online tickets can be purchased at http://our.show/madisontheatre at $10 for adults and $5 for students. Directed by Aaron Kelsey, Madison’s Fine Arts Academy program leader, visual arts director and theatre advisor, the musical is based on the 1942 Paramount Pictures film of the same name, has a cast of nearly 70 between the actors, singers, orchestra and crew.

Madison students perform four shows each season — two by the theatre class and two in which any student can audition — with playing range from musicals to dramas and comedies. The group staged “Monty Python’s Edukational Show” in October and after “Holiday Inn the other productions this year will include the musical “Newsies” and the comedy “Clue on Stage.”

After weeks of rehearsals, theatre students at Madison Consolidated High School will stage the musical “Holiday Inn” this weekend at North Madison Christian Church.

Directed by Aaron Kelsey, Madison’s Fine Arts Academy program leader, visual arts director and theatre advisor, the musical is based on the 1942 Paramount Pictures film of the same name and has a cast of nearly 70 between the actors, singers, orchestra and crew.

The Christmas-themed performance features a song-and-dance trio in which two of its members decide to pursue show business while the other follows his dreams of owning a farm while also performing. The performance is strong on singing and dancing.

According to Kelsey, “Holiday Inn” is about the 66th show he has directed, which includes a wide variety of musicals, plays and other types of performances. He said musicals always seem to be a favorite among students, but he tries to pick something that everyone will enjoy performing while also entertaining the audience.

Maddie Felts, a senior who will play Louise in “Holiday Inn,” said she joined theatre as a sophomore and has really enjoyed the Christmas theme of this musical, which focuses on the holidays. The play has a lot of joyous Christmas moments, Felts said, which seems to make everyone happy.

As a dance play, the performance features a lot of choreography, which is directed by Susie Stillwell.

Sam Hall, another senior who is part of the “Holiday Inn” chorus, said the choreography is his favorite part of the play since he is interested in tap dancing. He noted the play features both elegant dancing to more fast and upbeat numbers.

Pizza for good grades, attendance

Students enjoy their pizza incentive in the bleachers around noon in the auxillary gym. (Courier staff photos by Collin Overton)

Nearly 200 Southwestern High School students were treated to pizza in return for good grades, behavior and attendance Friday, Nov. 8 in the auxiliary gym.

The incentive was a product of the school corporation’s partnership with Hanover Pizza Hut. Every Thursday from Sept. 19 through Oct. 31, 20% of the store’s sales went toward the incentive program for activities meant to encourage better student GPA, attendance and conduct.

In the end, 190 high school students qualified for Friday’s incentive — a little over half the school — principal Matt Owens said.

Owens said pizza day is one of three incentive programs the school holds each year. In the past, others have included outings like movie theater trips and a cookout in the spring.

Ethan Stewart, a junior, hands English teacher Tod Cannon his ticket for a free personal pizza from Hanover Pizza Hut.

The first wave of high schoolers line up for free pizza and drinks as a reward for being good students.

Runnels-Shadday vows exchanged

Jessica Lynn Runnels of Richmond, Indiana, and Robert Blair Shadday of Madison, Indiana, exchanged wedding vows Sept. 21, 2019, at the Star Gennett Building in Richmond.

The bride is the daughter of Skip and Terry Runnels of Richmond. She is a graduate of Indiana University. She is employed with Chubb Group of Insurance and the Indiana Pacers.

The groom is the son of Kevin Shadday and Becky Wentworth of Madison. He is a graduate of the University of Indianapolis. He is employed as the PGA golf professional at Forest Hills Country Club in Richmond.

The bride was escorted by her father. Casey Stevens, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. Bridesmaid was Katie Runnels.

Austin Schultz, friend of the groom, served as best man. Groomsmen were Tony Daniels.

They reside in Richmond.

BRIDGE

FROM WHERE WILL THEY ATTACK?

Oliver Wendell Holmes Sr., a physician and author whose son became a U.S. Supreme Court justice, wrote, "I find the great thing in this world is not so much where we stand, as in what direction we are moving."

When you are the declarer, you should try to anticipate which way the defenders will be moving. If one attack would be uncomfortable for you, try to find a way to avoid facing it.

In this deal, how should South play in three no-trump after West leads a fourth-highest heart five?

North realized that the fate of three no-trump probably rested on his club suit. If it was worth five or six tricks, game would probably roll home. But if it were not so productive, even two no-trump would probably be too high. So North sensibly went for the big payday.

Declarer starts with five top tricks: three spades, one heart and one diamond. He can get five more winners from the clubs and has two dummy entries. The only danger is that the defenders might be able to cash too many tricks of their own when in with the club ace.

There is a natural reaction to hold up the heart ace at trick one. Maybe West has even led from king-queen-empty-fourth or -fifth. But suppose East can take the first trick; what will he do then?

Opening lead: ♥ 5

If he plays another heart, everything will be hunky-dory. But what if he suddenly attacks from a different direction, shifting to a diamond?

Then the contract will be in jeopardy -- and with this layout, dead. The defenders will take one heart, one club and three diamonds.

South should win the first trick with dummy's heart ace and play on clubs.

Unable to forgive and forget

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: My daughter recently passed from complications of myasthenia gravis. She died unexpectedly one evening after she stopped breathing during an MG crisis. Myasthenia gravis is a chronic autoimmune neuromuscular disease that causes weakness in the skeletal muscles, which are responsible for breathing and moving parts of the body, including the arms and legs.

My problem is with her mother-in-law. While my daughter was receiving treatment for this disease, her mother-in-law told her she was making up the symptoms and actually went so far as to accuse her of having Munchausen syndrome. Mind you, this was after a weeklong stay in the ICU. This is just one example of her dislike for my daughter. She did not approve of my daughter's marriage to her son and was not very happy about their relationship from the beginning.

My question is this: How can I ever be friendly to this person again after she made these horrible accusations toward my daughter and treated her with such disrespect? It was hard enough to be cordial with her and her husband at the funeral. Since we live in the same town and share a grandchild with them, I'm trying to forgive and forget. But I am having a really hard time with this. She gave my daughter a lot of stress, and stress is one of the things that can trigger a crisis when you have MG. So every time I see her, I can't help but feel she played a contributing factor in my daughter's passing. — Missing My Daughter

Dear Missing: I am so sorry for your loss. Your daughter's mother-in-law is heaping additional pain onto your already unbearable load. Her behavior goes beyond the realm of meanness: It sounds as though she might suffer from a mental disorder herself. A mentally healthy person doesn't say the things she has. I hope she seeks help and recognizes the impact she's had on people, especially you and your daughter.

In the meantime, you are under no obligation to be friends with her. I'm not advocating hostility: A neutral, matter-of-fact attitude will do just fine. If she finds that offensive, she shouldn't have said what she did. It's not about harboring a grudge but rather respecting your own boundaries and needs.

Focus on you and honoring your daughter and your loss right now. The work of grief is demanding enough.

Dear Annie: My wife and I and four friends went out to dinner at a new restaurant. They had a ladies' room and a men's room visible from where we sat. After the meal, I needed to go. The men's room was locked (it was a single-stall situation). I walked around for a bit and came back after nearly 10 minutes. The door was still locked, and I continued to wait. Finally, I couldn't last any longer. The women's room was unlocked and vacant, so in I went. When I came out, everyone said that I was rude and out of line. I said that they were being overly sensitive! What should I have done? — Almost Up a Tree

Dear Almost Up a Tree: You did your due diligence in waiting for the men's room. Next time, I'd caution you not to wander around the restaurant, in case the person emerges and you miss your opportunity. And I'd encourage you to go to the restroom preemptively, before it's an emergency. That said, I don't think anyone can fairly call you rude here. It was a single-stall bathroom, and you ensured that it was empty before entering. If your wife and friends find that so uncouth, I'd ask them what the other options were in that moment. Sometimes, when nature calls, you have no choice but to answer.

What if every day was Election Day?
Well, it is. Every day you cast a vote with every dollar you spend. For example, when you decide to save a little money, you're voting for your family's future. When you shop and invest locally, you're voting in support of more money in our local economy. Cast your vote for hometown people.
Here for community, here for you, here to stay.
